FINES IN TEST CASE.

IMPOSED UNDER EIGHT-HOUR LAW FOR WOMEN.

Arguments Made Before Justice Kersten in a Suit Brought Against Manufact-urers for Violations of the Statute Regulating the Treatment of Female Factory Help-The Constitutionality of the Act Discussed by the Counsel-Case to Be Taken at Once to Supreme Court.

Be Taken at Once to Supreme Court.

Justice Kersten yesterday afternoon decided a number of cases brought against manufacturers for violation of the factory law by imposing these ranging from $3 to $5 and costs upon eighteen of the defendants. The cases, which it was agreed should constitue a test of time law, will be Immediately transferred to the Criminal Court and thence taken to the Supreme Court so as to be docketed on the March term calendar.

The cases have been on hearing for several days, upwards of 1,000 manufacturers being represented in the defense, which was conducted by Attorney Levy Mayer. John W. Ela appeared for the State. The constitutionality of the hw it was of course and within the functions of a Justice of the Peace to decide. Notwithstanding this in the lengthy arguments made by counsel for both sides, the legality of the law was the chief subject reviewed. wed.

Mr. Ela made the closing argument yester-day and outlined the position which the State will take in its briefs before the Supreme Court.

Replying to the contention of the defense that the law was class legislation and therefore defective he said the law sprang out of the powers conferred upon the State defined as police powers. Under this power the State might emet any law alimed to guard public welfare, morality, and public policy. Numerous laws on the statute books recognized the right of women to labor, but others restricted the field of her work. Women, for instance, could not be outployed in mines. The law probibiting this had never been questioned in this State. The constitutionality of a similar law made in Missachusetts, under a Constitution similar to that of Illinois, had been passed upon by the Supreme Court of that State. The same points were made there as were made here and the court ensiminar to that of Illinois, had been passed upon by the Supreme Court of that State. The same points were made there as were made here and the court ensiminar to that of Illinois, had seen passed upon by the Supreme Court of that State. The same points were made there as were made here and the court ensimined to law. "Legislation in this State has recognized that distinctions should be made in favor of women." Said Mr. Els. "In the recent laws opening all occupations to women they are exempt from these occupations on mecount of their physical weakness as compared to men. This difference is the basis of the factory law they are exempt from these occupations on account of their physical weakness as compared to men. This difference is the basis of the factory are. In these cases the evidence shows that the women employed in this class of factories are nearly all of tender years. When the factory is buy they often work from 8 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock are night, with a stoppage of thirty minutes at noon and in the women employed in this class of factories are nearly all of tender years standing at machines all this time. No better argument is needed than this fact to prove that the State, under its police powers, should enact laws to regulat

Humane Motives Considered.

Mr. Ela cited many authorities and traced the resemblance between the act and others passed by other States, closing with a strong plea for the humane motives which underlaid it and an equally strong statement of the conditions which led to its passage.

The cases in which the flaes were imposed cover every phase of the new law. The clause prohibiting the employment of girls under 16 years without a certificate from their parents or guardians setting forth their age and date of birth, relating to the posting of the new law in all factories where femiles are employed, and prohibiting the employment of women more than eight hours per day were all covered.

women more han eight nours per day were all covered.

It was said by the attorneys that every effort would be made to expedite the cases to the Supreme Court. They expected that this could be done so as to secure a decision from that tribunal within a few weeks.
